2. Key Developments

In this eleven months period (June 08 – April 09) some key developments at the Ethnicity URC have been:

1. As a result of the Vice Chancellor's subvention to support Modood's research and public engagement for 2008-10, we were able to make a new Centre/Sociology Department appointment. Dr Therese O'Toole, previously at University of Birmingham, joined the University in September, 2008 as a Lecturer, thus increasing the Centre's core, permanent staff.
2. Two significant new grants were Statham's EU FP7 three year EURISLAM project, with Bristol being one of 6 Consortium partners, and Fox's ESRC funding for research on Hungarian and Romanian Migrant Workers in the UK.
3. Statham's ESRC/ESF project on the European Public Sphere finished during this period but work continues on the EU FP6 project on local Multicultural Democracy; the Leverhulme Programme projects were extended to the end of 2009 and the EU project EMILIE has been extended till September, 2009.
4. Two prestigious conferences were held by the Centre. Over a hundred international participants attended the Leverhulme Programme Conference, while the closing conference of the European Public Sphere project was attended by senior officials of the EU.
5. Our work with Bristol colleagues outside the Centre is now quite notable. Statham continues to direct the EuroPolCom Centre and is working with Prof Michelle Cini in Politics; they were awarded Faculty seedcorn funding to develop a major interdisciplinary bid, as were Bradley, Fenton and Khattab, together with Prof Leon Tikly in GSoE. Fox is participating in the new Identity and Learning Theme and Modood and Rachel Murray of the Human Rights Theme have talked about a collaboration. He has also been approached by Debbie Lawlor of Social Medicine in relation to a leadership team bid for the 2012 birth cohort. Together with Gregor McLennan from Sociology, Modood initiated an interfaculty seminar series on secularity and postsecularity hosted by the Institute of Advanced Studies. He is currently in discussion with the Dean of Social Sciences and Law on launching a high profile BIPA annual lecture on religion and conflict. We are also in touch with the new Global Insecurities Centre in Politics with a view to forging links.
6. Our research student numbers continue to be strong. Currently Centre staff are supervising 11 students on ethnicity and related topics (only). We have made these research students Associates of the Centre; they are an important part of the research culture of the Centre, especially in relation to visiting speaker seminars and we now invite the students to join us for dinner with the speaker after the talk and reception.
7. There were over 60 publications (including forthcoming) and over 100 talks given by members of the Centre (details below).

8. Our public engagement profile continues to be amongst the best in the University. Highlights include Modood serving on the IPPR Commission on National Security and the National Equality Panel, which reports to the Deputy Prime Minister; and public lectures in Brazil which were reported in over half a dozen Brazilian newspapers and by a television station.

3. Existing Funded Projects
